STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Last Chance Store was erected in 1857 by Tom Hill on the north side of the Santa Fe trail, some five blocks west of the Neosho river crossing at Council Grove. At the time it was the last store in the settlement going west on the trail, hence its name. (It was also one of the first stores in the settlement.)

The building housed post office facilities for several years and also served as a government trading house. On August 2, 1858, it was the polling place when the people voted on the Lecompton Constitution. It was for a time the last opportunity for freighters bound for Santa Fe to pick up supplies for their journey, and apparently also a place where the Kaw Indians from the nearby reservation could trade for manufactured goods. In later years the structure was a residence and at present serves as a storehouse for the owner's antique collection.

The Last Chance Store is significant for its connection with the Santa Fe trail trade and the early development of Council Grove. The Last Chance Store and the Hays Tavern are the two oldest commercial buildings in Council Grove, both constructed in 1857.
